This section of the medical insurance policy details services _____. Any medical procedure or consultation performed by non-accredited providers will not be covered by us. The same goes for voluntary examinations that are not considered medically necessary. Likewise, treatments that are still considered experimental, investigational, or unproven are not subject to a claim. Expenses incurred from surgical procedures done for aesthetic reasons, excluding those needed for reconstructive purposes, are also not reimbursable. In addition, conditions for which the policyholder has previously sought medical advice will not be covered.

- (a) requested by patients most frequently
- (b) excluded from your current health plan
- (c) classified as novel medical treatments
- (d) limited to a small number of physicians

2.

Rococo is an elegant and playful architectural style that came into prominence in the 1700s. It is exemplified by design elements comprising whimsical, yet intricate and ornate, patterns. Unlike the over-the-top components, the colors are relatively muted, with ivory, gold, and pastels being the most common. Structures that exhibit Rococo architecture are predominantly found in Europe, where monarchs commonly made attestations of power and wealth. _____, the renowned royal château in Versailles, luxuriously furnished in the rococo style, reflects the indulgent and frivolous lifestyle of the period's French aristocracy.

- (a) For example
- (b) Conversely
- (c) As a result
- (d) Furthermore

Part 2 Question 3

Read the passage. Then identify the option that does NOT belong.

3.

Over the last 40 years, global warming has had a major effect on weather systems in the North Atlantic. (a) Due to the warmer temperatures of the ocean's surface waters caused by the phenomenon, tropical cyclones in the region strengthen more readily. (b) This has made the occurrence of the strongest storms, those classified as category 4 and 5, common. (c) Hurricanes and typhoons differ only in their location, but not in their intensity. (d) In fact, all but two of the ten most intense Atlantic cyclones of all time have developed since 1980.

Part 3 Questions 4 and 5

Read the passage and the question. Then choose the option that best answers the questions.

Lord of the Universe, which lampooned new age guru Maharaj Ji, was one of the funniest and most critically acclaimed documentary films of the 1970s. It was well received by critics and garnered the prestigious Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Award in Broadcast Journalism. The jurors complimented the film for its hilarious take on the subject. A bigwig at the Public Broadcasting Service was so impressed by the screenwriters' tongue-in-cheek style that he helped them raise funds to produce more works. The filmmakers went on to produce five more documentary films, including Gerald Ford's America and The Good Times are Killing Me.

Q: What is the main idea of the passage?

- (a) The award's judges shared the filmmakers' views on religion.
- (b) Television stations were unsure of the film's potential for profitability.
- (c) The documentary's comical sequences earned praise from film experts.
- (d) Newspaper movie reviewers gave the filmmakers a prestigious award.

Dear Mr. Richmond,

Thank you for your invitation to be a speaker at the University of Charlotte's Medical Forum in December. I have always relished the opportunity to give something back to my alma mater. Regretfully, I must decline the invitation due to a scheduling conflict. I am slated to be in Vienna on the same weekend to attend an important yearly conference on bioethics. Should you wish to have me speak at another school event in the future, I would be happy to oblige you. Please feel free to make arrangements with my office by calling 555-3208. My assistant, David Schein, will gladly assist you.

Sincerely,

Dr. Jodi Keeler

Q: What is correct about Ms. Keeler according to the letter?

- (a) She is a recent graduate of a school in Charlotte.
- (b) She wants to organize a medical conference next year.
- (c) She is taking a scheduled trip to Vienna in December.
- (d) She was introduced to Mr. Richmond by her assistant.

Part 4 Questions 6 and 7

Read the passage and the questions. Then choose the option that best answers each question.

6-7.

Separation anxiety manifests in different forms throughout life. It is common for an infant, at some stage in its development, to panic when a parent leaves the room. The reason the baby cries in this situation is that it has no way of comprehending that its parent is nearby and continues to exist. In short, the child believes it has been abandoned when he or she cannot see the caregiver. For kids up to the age of 3, this problem is not viewed as a disorder by psychologists. In older children or grown-ups, however, parting issues can be a cause for concern and may even necessitate medical treatment.

Experts estimate that about 5 percent of the adult population suffers from separation anxiety. Afflicted individuals continually fret about the possibility of being cut off from a loved one. Held back by these worries, such people may refuse to leave their home and can have trouble spending time alone. The disorder can manifest itself physically when parting occurs through headaches, vomiting, and other symptoms. Some individuals opt to undergo cognitive behavioral therapy, which helps them establish various mental coping mechanisms to overcome the crippling effects of anxiety.

Q: When do sufferers feel physically unwell according to the passage?

- (a) At the start of a treatment process
- (b) While using coping mechanisms
- (c) When a close person is not present
- (d) During the initial stages of parenthood

7.

Q: What can be inferred from the passage?

- (a) Distress by infants upon separation is a normal response.
- (b) Anxiety in grown-ups is exacerbated by the presence of crying babies.
- (c) A high proportion of adults have received cognitive behavioral therapy.
- (d) Older children are prone to bouts of physical sickness.
